SHARING SONGS

There are many important benefits of sharing songs and rhymes. It is an excellent opportunity for parents to spend time with their children. Begin reading and singing to your child as soon as they are born. Songs are portable playthings! You can use these songs anytime and any place.

Sharing songs provides valuable preparation for learning to read, because it develops emergent literacy skills that have been identified by educators. For example, singing songs is a good way to help your child hear the syllables in words, learn new vocabulary, understand a sequence of events, and more. For more information, see the emergent literacy page on our kids' website.

If you don't know the tune, make one up, or just recite the verses. These WEBSITES provide the words and play the tunes to many favorite songs:
